St. Petersburg Times names New Deputy Director of Photography

St. Petersburg, FL - Jack Rowland has been promoted to Deputy Director of Photography at the St. Petersburg (FLa) Times. In making the announcement, Director of Photography Boyzell Hosey wrote:

"Jack is a seasoned visual journalist who possesses an abundance of technical and editing knowledge that has only enhanced his great photojournalism skills. A longtime anchor of the photo staff, Jack's commitment to excellence and accountability makes him an ideal choice to lead the operations and logistical side of the department. This role is not unfamiliar to Jack as he has demonstrated time and time again his ability to coordinate and execute high-level visual plans for the photo department. Jack was responsible for leading the very successful strategic plan for the Times' award winning approach to Hurricane Katrina."

Hosey added, "Along with his operational strengths, Jack is an award winning photojournalist and seasoned picture editor with a keen eye for content. This will serve him well as he undergirds a department that relies on technological advances and careful planning."

A graduate of the University of Florida, Rowland came to the Times in 1986. He worked his way through the ranks as a photographer, picture editor and eventually as director of photo technology.
